Honoring America's Magnificent National Park Wonders
Paintings by Eugene Kingman

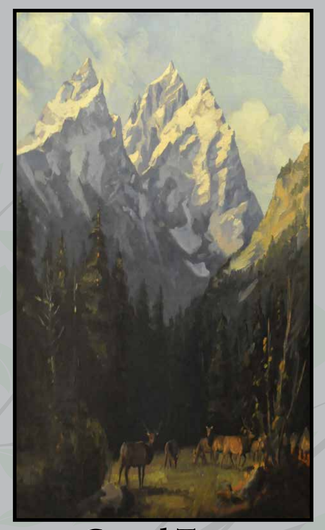

Yellowstone National Park

Sequoia National Park

Mt. Rainier National Park

Grand Teton National Park

Celebrating the National Park Service 2016 Centennial

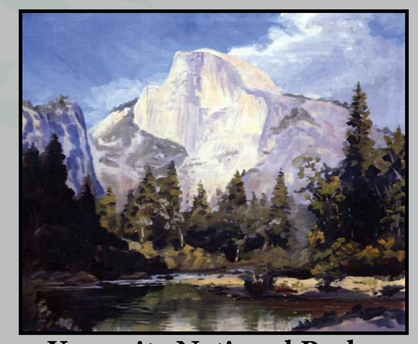

"Youthful Artist Achieves Honor — Eugene Kingman 21, Chosen by the National Park Service to Paint Seven Pictures to be Exhibited in Paris"
—The Providence Journal - January 13, 1931

Grand Canyon National Park

Crater Lake National Park

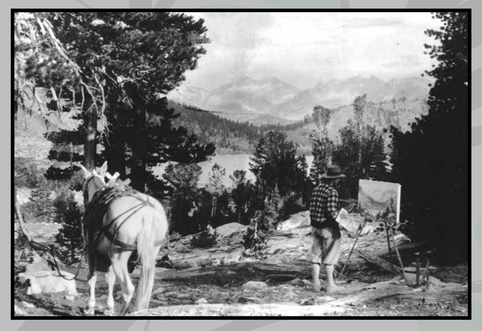

Yosemite National Park

PRESENTING THE PARKS - 1931 PARIS EXPO

Back in 1931 HORACE M. ALBRIGHT, the Director of the National Park Service, commissioned Eugene Kingman to paint large oil paintings of seven national parks, which were sent to Paris to be displayed during the 1931 Paris Expo. Albright wanted to attract Europeans to visit and experience first-hand America's treasured natural wonders. The idea was to lift everyone's spirits during the pre-"New Deal" era following the Great Depression.

May these seven paintings continue to serve as an inspiring reminder for us all around the world to experience the extraordinary beauty of these parks, as well as other spectacular national parks throughout America.

Deep appreciation to Presidents Theodore and Franklin D. Roosevelt, John Muir, the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC), the Work Projects Administration (WPA), plus all those who were involved over the past 100 years in making the national and state parks what they are today.

EUGENE KINGMAN

Celebrated 20th Century Artist
1909-1975
www.eugenekingman.com

Poster Design: Mixie Kingman Eddy

Photo Production: Quinlan Kingman Eddy and Elizabeth Anne Kingman

© Eugene Kingman, LLC